The Action: The action is intense and the gameplay is designed to keep you hooked throughout. Get behind the controls of the highly advanced Harbinger class attack cruiser and rip the flesh off your enemies in intense dogfights with a wide variety of opponents. Shoot down dozens of enemy pilots and spacecraft in midair and on the ground, or evade a barrage of enemy fire while maneuvering, firing, and dodging the enemy's onslaught. The Technology: The Harbinger features a unique VGA graphics engine with a revolutionary set of shaders that allow you to change the game on the fly, ranging from a "Naturalistic" to a "Bright" look. You will be able to zoom in and out, view depth maps of your ship's hull, and get more detailed representations of your enemy's ships. The way you are able to see all of these things dynamically is by using the S3 Basic Shaders, allowing you to model features such as engines, weapons, and hulls with a greater level of detail than was possible before. The Soundtrack: The soundtrack is built around the addictive engine sound and ambiance, composed in a style reminiscent of classic 8-bit music. The game features a wide array of cues that will keep you on your toes. You'll hear the metallic rumble of enemy fire, the crackle of laser fire, the whine of plasma fire, the hiss of blood being scorched, the click of magnetic grapples closing in, the hum of a fusion engine, and the cry of a dying human.

for Chivalry II Bogatyr Soundtrack for Chivalry II is the soundtrack for the 2010 video game Chivalry II by Gameloft, licensed as a 10-title soundtrack for Streamline Music Group. The video game is a take on the "Great War" in the Siberian campaign (played from the western perspective) of the 1812-22 Russo-Turkish War, also known as the 'Great East Asian War'. The soundtrack was composed and produced by several music composers of Russian Industrial and Progressive rock backgrounds. Most of the tracks featured are mellow and alternative in nature, and usually feature slow tempi and tempo variability to give the soundtrack an organic and at times, rather unique feel. The release includes three versions of the complete soundtrack: the 7/8 format for films and other digital formats, the album format for high quality headphones and the 2/4 format for low quality devices such as TV and radio. Development Background Awhile back there were rumors that Gameloft was developing a sequel to one of their games, Chivalry, but these rumors were never confirmed and seemed to have no certain source of correct information. However, one of the companies who have licenses for Chivalry II, a Russian calligraphic company named Streamline Music Group, announced back in April of 2010 that they had finished or were almost finished with the development of their license for Chivalry II and they wanted to have the album of the soundtrack done by then to use for video promotion. While going through the licensing process, the company found Gameloft and invited them to participate. Streamline Music Group paid a lot of money to Gameloft to get their license for Chivalry II. It wasn't until the fall of 2010 that Streamline Music Group got their product and they were understandably upset of something they were not expecting to see in the game. They found that most of the tracks on the soundtrack were those appearing in the music to other standard games of the same action genre. They were also not in a certain order and that it was unnecessarily represented in their song selections. Also, the soundtrack was incomplete. Many were asking if this is a pirated soundtrack and that it was not their payment that was the source of the problem. However, no hard evidence other than their sense of reality was enough to convince the licensors that such bad remaster and presentation wasn't done knowingly. When questioned by the licensors, Gameloft, who requested Streamline Music Group to put the
